“ I light a yellow candle for you for that is the color of friendship..as you and your whole family are considered my family. I came to celebrate your life today and looked at picture boards of memories. You lived a full life and shared it with so many people and I am honored to have been one of them. I am saying farewell...for now my friend. I wont be sad that your gone. Instead I will be proud to have known you and proud to see your legacy carry on. Rest in Heaven my friend

“ This wonderful man was the man of my dreams, I could never have asked for anyone better, we loved each other unconditionally, no matter what, we shared everything, did everything for each other, tested each other lol..... Respected each other, we were so proud to be each others half, we were one, heart, body & soul..... I will always miss him terribly but I have great memories & life with him, we had a home, a truck, a loving dog that they also shared such a special bond & love, he also had a son that I still to this day consider my step son, I consider myself his wife even though we never had our wedding we both dreamed of, at home that's what we called each other husband & wife I wouldn't have it any other way.... He always put us 1st, made me feel so special, told me every day I was & I was his, I was beautiful all the things I've never heard from a man b4 that meant so much & I felt the same & told him the same things, we enjoyed the same things, were always together, he never could handle being apart from me which I loved so much & he's still with me in my heart & spirit..... I love you my dear fiance/husband
